LEGACY RELEASES MA$E DISS RECORD

Former Member of S.A.N.E Church now El Elyon Releases a Track Inspired by Pastor, Mason Betha

Atlanta, GA – November 17, 2009 – Rap artist LEGACY THE JESUS is making waves upon the release of his new mixtape record over rapper Rick Ross' beat, "Eviction". The track speaks of his disdain for fellow rapper Ma$.

LEGACY joined the S.A.N.E Church in 2004 and was a member for three years before leaving. According to LEGACY, his former pastor did not fulfill the promises that he made to the church about why he was going back into music. LEGACY, along with many others in the congregation served as "investors" providing their own money to help fund Ma$e's musical endeavors.

LEGACY requested several meetings with Ma$e to discuss his concerns and each one was rejected. One year after parting ways with Ma$e and the S.A.N.E Church, LEGACY was inspired to write this song. After speaking with several other disparaged former members of the church, he felt that Ma$e had just left them out to dry. He didn't like the way that Ma$e was treating those who had been extremely loyal to him.

Because Ma$e refused to speak with LEGACY one on one, he felt that the only other way to reach him was through music. "My goal for this song is to let Ma$e know directly how I feel because everyone around him is a yes man," stated LEGACY. "Sometimes people in high positions need to be told the truth and be held accountable, and I don't think the people around him are telling him the truth."

LEGACY is now attending a church where people are loved and accepted by how much they love God and not by how much they give. He wants his listeners to know that "nobody is perfect, but everyone needs to be held accountable for what they say and do, especially when other people's lives depend on it."
